Previously issued photo red light citations are still valid and are being prosecuted. Persons issued citations must still appear as directed in their citation or courtesy letter.

On February 1, 2013, the City of San Diego discontinued the use of the photo red light enforcement cameras at intersections within the City. The San Diego Police Department is not issuing citations dated after January 31, 2013. However, if the violations occurred prior to the camera discontinuation, the citation is still issued and will be prosecuted. The decision to stop using the photo red light cameras as a traffic enforcement tool does not invalidate previous violations / citations.

If you have received a photo red light citation, you are still required to appear in court or contact the San Diego Superior Court, Central Traffic Department "B", as shown on your citation or courtesy letter.

This release is to clarify recent inquiries into citation validity. All questions or requests for comment will be handled by Sergeant Joel McMurrin whose information is found above.
